Trends and Strategies for the Decade

NUPACE 15th Anniversary Symposium &
Student Exchange Alumni Reunion

Foreword

The Nagoya University Program for Academic Exchange (NUPACE) is honoured to convene the NUPACE 15th Anniversary Symposium and Student Exchange Alumni Reunion, an event made possible through the generous support of the President's Office and the Nagoya University Alumni Association (NUAL).

Inspired by the Junior Year Abroad in the United States and ERASMUS in the EU, Japan's Ministry of Education (MEXT) established the Short-term Student Exchange Promotion Program in 1995 with the objective of facilitating undergraduate student mobility. The Nagoya University Program for Academic Exchange (NUPACE) was successfully launched shortly afterwards in 1996.

Now, fifteen years after its inauguration, NUPACE hosts approximately 100 students annually, the composition of which comprises an enviable regional balance. Significantly, a large proportion of NUPACE students have been, and continue to be financially supported by JASSO-administered scholarships, which have undeniably served as a catalyst in the development of NUPACE and short-term student exchange at Japanese national universities in general.

The impact of NUPACE students is immeasurable. They have enhanced the quality of education at Nagoya University, improved the foreign language proficiency of students, faculty and staff, and have, in turn, motivated a new generation of young people, aspiring to act globally.

Furthermore, albeit indirectly, this university has been stimulated by the presence of a burgeoning community of international students at the structural level. In the last decade, a significant number of internationally-oriented programmes and projects have been launched including, in 2002, the Academic Consortium 21(AC21) and, as of 2011, the Global 30 (G30) degree programmes.

Nevertheless, despite laudable initiatives, Japanese universities in general are undeniably facing challenges both in attracting and retaining their international student cohort, a problem arguably compounded by the Great East Japan Earthquake of March 2011 and, more seriously, in sending their own students overseas.

This Symposium, entitled, "Innovation in International Student Exchange: Trends and Strategies for the Decade" hopes to address current challenges in international student exchange and, from a variety of angles, to explore innovative policies and strategies aimed at nurturing the next generation of globally-oriented leaders.

On this, the occasion of the NUPACE 15th Anniversary and Alumni Reunion, NUPACE is honoured to invite real time actors in the field of student exchange from Germany and the Republic of Korea. The vision, dedication and energy of our colleagues abroad are indispensable to the promotion of academic exchange at this University. Indeed, it is significant that owing to the collaboration of partner universities, student exchange has come to exceed individual student effort and is now facilitated by the construction of strong university partnerships and international university networks.

Finally, we greatly appreciate and are excited by the presence at this event of NUPACE alumni and Nagoya University exchange student alumni. We look forward with anticipation to comments and feedback, not only on their respective student exchange programmes, but also on their experiences in general. NUPACE is heartened by the development of an international NUPACE network; indeed, we are convinced that the activities of our alumni will come to have an impact on a global scale.

Friday, October 14: NUPACE 15th Anniversary Symposium

■ 13:00~13:30 Session 1: NUPACE 15th Anniversary Keynote Addresses

Master of Ceremony

As Director of the Education Centre for International Students, Professor Ken Machida takes charge of the overall management of education as well as the provision of substantial and mental aids for foreign students of Nagoya University.

Ken Machida's speciality is linguistics, the study of structures, meanings, history and geographical distributions of language. His major concern is how and why language types and word orders are interrelated. However historically or geographically remote different languages may be, they tend to show similar word order rules if they belong to the same language type. The theoretical investigation of this question helps understand the hypothetically necessary relations of meaning and structure of human language.

Opening Address

Professor Takashi Miyata became Vice-President of Nagoya University in 2006 and, since 2008 has served as Trustee (Industry-Academia-Government Collaboration/Community Relations/International Student Exchange) Previous positions include Vice-Dean of the Graduate School of Engineering in 2002-2004.

Takashi Miyata's academic background is in structural materials and processing, where his current research interests focus on fracture toughness evaluation and the application of fracture mechanics to structural integrity. He received his doctorate of Engineering from the University of Tokyo, and spent some time as a foreign research fellow at the University of Stuttgart in Germany.

Keynote Address

Mr. Junsaku Mizuhata, a graduate of Waseda University's School of Social Sciences, entered the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology (MEXT) in 1997. He assumed his current position as Deputy Director for International Student Exchange at the Student Support and Exchange Division, Higher Education Bureau in April 2011.

In 2002, Junsaku Mizuhata received a master's degree in Education from the Department of Educational Studies at the University of British Columbia in Canada.

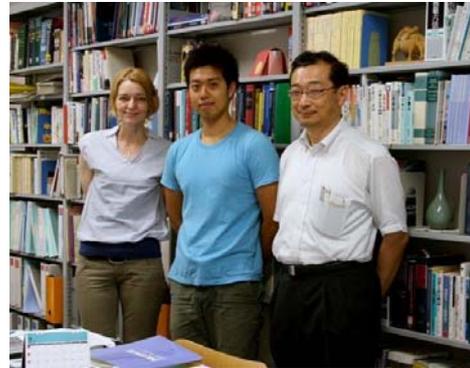

■ 13: 30~17:00 Session 2: Panel Discussions

Panel Discussion 1 – Student Exchange Policy and Programmes: Fresh Approaches to Contemporary Challenges

Associate Professor Claudia Ishikawa is co-ordinator of the Nagoya University Programme for Academic Exchange (NUPACE), Nagoya University's short-term (non-degree) exchange programme for students enrolled at partner institutions. Her duties principally involve international liaison, publicity, admissions and the negotiation of academic exchange agreements. Since its establishment in 1996, NUPACE has been host to over 1000 students from 107 institutions worldwide.

Claudia Ishikawa's research interests are in comparative immigration law and policy, and the legal status of aliens. She serves on the executive board of the Japan Association for Migration Policy Studies. Claudia Ishikawa received her MA (Hons.) from the University of St. Andrews, her LL.M. from Nagoya University, and is currently enrolled in the LL.D. programme at this University. She teaches 'Immigration in Japan - A Socio-legal Perspective'.

Panellists (in alphabetical order):

Mr. Benjamin Gehring has been working as Program Manager Asia, at the International Office of the University of Freiburg since August 2011. His responsibilities include the management of exchange programmes, support of international exchange students during their stay at Freiburg, and the structural development of Special Programs Japan.

Benjamin Gehring has experienced study abroad as an exchange student himself, having studied at the University of Birmingham in the United Kingdom

Professor Sachihiko Kondo is affiliated to the Center for International Education and Exchange at Osaka University, where he serves as Team Leader of Short-term Programs (Team SteP), and co-ordinator of OUSSEP, Osaka University's short-term student exchange programme. His research interests lie in the fields of social psychology, discourse analysis, and international education.

Hailing from Fukuoka city, Sachihiko Kondo pursued his bachelor's degree in Sociology at Osaka University. Then, from 1994-2000, and after working as an editor at Shinchosha Publishing, he moved to the United Kingdom to pursue advanced degrees at the Universities of London (LSE) and Loughborough.

Mr. Junsaku Mizuhata, a graduate of Waseda University's School of Social Sciences, entered the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology (MEXT) in 1997. He assumed his current position as Deputy Director for International Student Exchange at the Student Support and Exchange Division, Higher Education Bureau in April 2011.

In 2002, Junsaku Mizuhata received a master's degree in Education from the Department of Educational Studies at the University of British Columbia in Canada..

Professor Tsutomu Nomizu was involved in the establishment of the Nagoya University Program for Academic Exchange (NUPACE) in 1996 and has, during these fifteen years, contributed to internationalisation of Nagoya University. During 2006 -2009, he served as Director of the General Secretariat of the Academic Consortium 21 (AC21), an international university consortium founded by Nagoya University in 2002 and, in 2008- 2009, was concurrently appointed Advisor to the President and Director of Nagoya University's International Strategy Planning Office. He has, moreover, negotiated the conclusion of exchange agreements with more than fifty world leading universities. In addition to his affiliation with the Education Center for International Students, Tsutomu Nomizu belongs to the Graduate School of Engineering, working in the field of instrumental analytical chemistry.

As of 2011, Tsutomu Nomizu serves as Chairman of the Japan Association for International Students Education (JAISE).

Ms. JJ Park has been employed at Korea University since 2008. She is in charge of exchange and study abroad programmes administered through the international cooperation team of the Office of International Affairs. In this capacity JJ Park is responsible for advising KU students about study abroad opportunities and administering all matters related to facilitating programmes with close to 100 partner universities in Europe. She also facilitates the administrative processes for receiving incoming exchange students from these universities.

In addition, JJ Park edits, writes and publishes a variety of brochures and English communication pieces for the Office of International Affairs and its website oia.korea.ac.kr. She also translates legal and other confidential documents for the Office of the President at KU.

JJ Park was a foreign student herself, having studied abroad in the United Kingdom for over thirteen years, as well as in China.

Panel Discussion 2 – International Student Mobility: Changing Perspectives and New Directions

Panel Moderator

Dr. Nami Iwaki is an Associate Professor at the Education Centre for International Students, Nagoya University, where she teaches and also offers advising services for students interested in studying abroad. Nami Iwaki served as the Project Coordinator of the Academic Consortium 21 (AC21) General Secretariat from 2006 to 2009, and has been serving as the Deputy Director in an advisory role since 2010. Having received her Ph.D. from Nagoya University, her research focuses on second language acquisition and English language education in Japan.

Nami Iwaki spent her formative years in education in America, attending elementary, junior and senior high school.

Panellists (in alphabetical order):

Ms. Mai Kawasumi received a Bachelor of Science in Education from Nagoya University in 2005, having spent 2003-2004 participating in a French student exchange initiative, "Programme 8" at Louis Pasteur University in Strasbourg, France. In 2006-2007, Ms. Kawasumi furthered her study abroad experience by pursuing the MBA Sorbonne-Dauphine-Renault at the Paris Sorbonne and Paris Dauphine Universities.

Mai Kawasumi is currently employed as a steering systems buyer at Renault Nissan Purchasing Organisation (RNPO).

Dr. James Masterson is an assistant professor at Morehead State University, and earned his bachelor, master, and doctorate degrees from the University of Cincinnati. He is a scholar of international relations theory and research methodology with specialisation in international political economy. His research interests include the international relations of East Asia in general and analysing the nexus between Chinese foreign and economic relations with the world in particular. His forthcoming publication in "China Information" examines the effects economic factors have on Chinese political relations with its neighbours from 1987-2001. James Masterson teaches courses on International Relations theory, Current World Problems, US Foreign Policy, Asian Politics, and Comparative Politics. He has lived in China and Japan numerous times and has recently directed a study abroad program for MSU students studying in China and Vietnam.

James Masterson is a 1999 NUPACE alumni and studied at Nagoya University from April until September of that year.

Mr. Yuji Miwa majored in Quantum Science (prior to that, nuclear engineering) at the undergraduate level and changed his major to Finance at graduate school. While he was at graduate school, he participated in an Internship Program in Europe for 2 months and also in a study abroad programme for one year at North Carolina State University in the United States. After graduation from his master's programme, Yuji Miwa worked for an American-French consulting firm (Cap Gemini Ernst & Young) for 3 years, then moved to a US pharmaceutical company (Baxter) working for 5 years, and is currently working as a business planning analyst for a small-sized US pharmaceutical company, Celgene, which recently started business in Japan.

Mr. Roland Reiszek completed a master's degree in Computing Science with a Psychology minor at the University of Freiburg in Germany. During this time he participated in two student exchange programmes, first in 1999-2000 at the University of Aberdeen under the ERAMUS framework, and second, in 2001-2002, with NUPACE.

Roland Reiszek is currently employed as Associate Director at UBS Group Technology, a global financial services organisation headquartered in Switzerland. His hobbies include karate, skiing mountain-biking, music, and movies.

Ms. Eri Takahashi graduated from Nagoya University in 2009 with a major in French Literature. From 2006-2007, she was resident in Adelaide, Australia as an exchange student at Flinders University, where she studied mainly Tourism and English.

Currently, Eri Takahashi works at a corporate sales and management position at Japan Airlines in the Kansai area. She is always looking for a place where she can make the most of the experience and knowledge that she gained from having been an exchange student.

Assistant Professor Brian Waters came to Nagoya University in 1996 with the second wave of participants in NUPACE's inaugural year. After graduating from North Carolina State University with a degree in Textile Chemistry, he joined the JET Program, an English teaching programme that took him to Fukuoka from 1998-2000.

After JET, Brian Waters returned to the States for graduate school, earning a master's in Criminalistics from California State University, Los Angeles. He worked at the Los Angeles County Coroner from 2003 to February of 2011, returning to Japan to join the Department of Forensic Medicine at Fukuoka University as an Assistant Professor.

Panellists (in alphabetical order)

Mr. Marcin Aftyka, a Polish citizen, was born on October 30, 1981 in Warsaw. He majored in Vehicles Maintenance and Operation at Warsaw University of Technology, with his MSE being awarded in 2007. He was a NUPACE student from September 2005 until August 2006.

Marcin Aftyka joined Toyota Motor Europe (Brussels, Belgium) in 2007 as an engineer in its Homologation Department. From 2009 he became a member of the Powertrain Department (in 2010 being promoted to senior engineer). He is currently on assignment at Toyota Motor Corporation's Department of Fuel Economy System Development.

Marcin Aftyka is married. His hobbies include the automotive industry, jogging, travel, and classical music.

Ms. Flor de Liana Cerros Martinez currently serves as vice-president of CMA Graphix Group, a company selling specialised paper. She joined NUPACE from September 2005 to August 2006 as an exchange student from the Institut Supérieur de Traducteurs et Interprètes (ISTI) in Belgium.

Mr. Sebastien Emtaz-Collomb first studied English as an undergraduate student in Stendhal University, Grenoble and, in 2006, broadened his major to encompass Japanese.

In 2009, he participated in NUPACE as an exchange student, returning to France in 2010 to graduate with a bachelor's degree from the School of Language.

As of October 2011, Sebastien Emtaz-Collomb has been admitted to the master's programme of the Graduate School of Languages and Cultures, Nagoya University, within the framework of the "Global 30 Program". He will conduct a trilingual comparative analysis of the messages within the songs of Walt Disney's movies.

Mr. Dwiky Yoseph C. Peranginangin completed his undergraduate studies at the Japanese Department, Faculty of Letters, Padjadjaran University, Indonesia in August 2009. Shortly after that, in order to gain experience in teaching, he started to work as a Japanese teacher and staff member at a private worker despatch organisation, which trained and provided Indonesian labour for employment in Japan.

After six months of teaching and, in order to deepen his knowledge of Japanese, Dwiky Peranginangin decided to continue his studies, returning to Nagoya University this April. Currently, he is studying as a research student at the Graduate Schools of Letters.

Ms. Xiaohan Shi is currently an undergraduate student majoring in International Politics at Zhejiang University. Since April 2011, she has been working as an intern reporter for Shanghai Daily, a local English newspaper in China, writing news and feature stories of the city of Hangzhou. Xiaohan Shi participated in NUPACE as an exchange student from 2009 to 2010.

Mr. Justin Wang was a NUPACE student from October 2003 to August 2004. He graduated from North Carolina State University in 2005 with B.S. degree in biology and biochemistry.

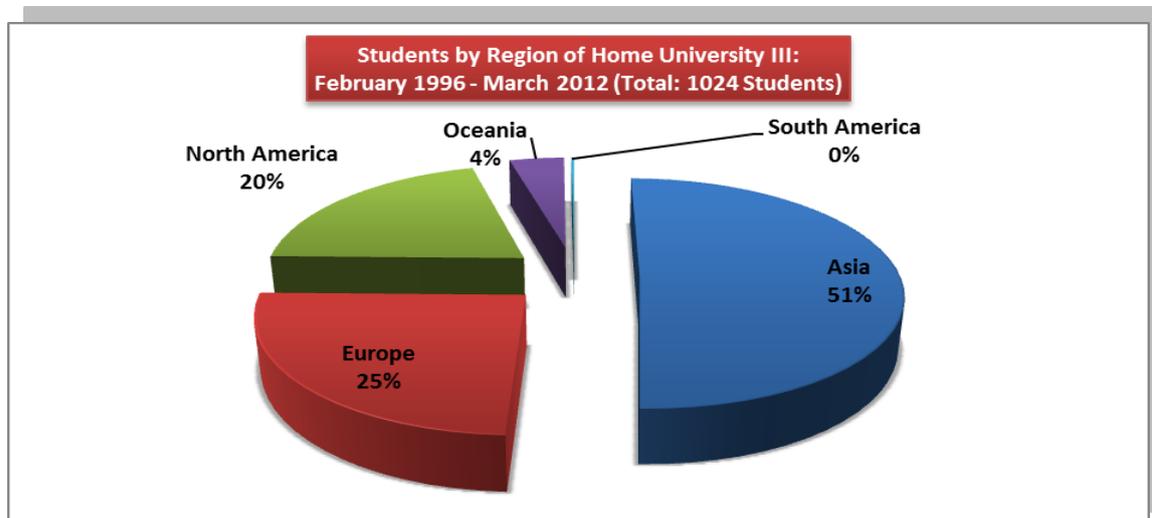

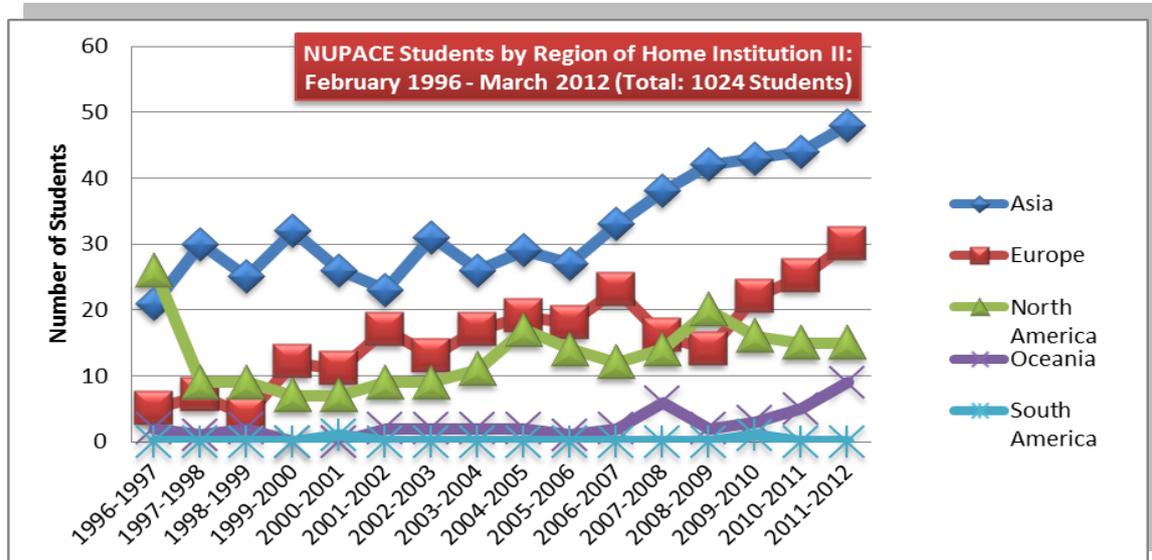

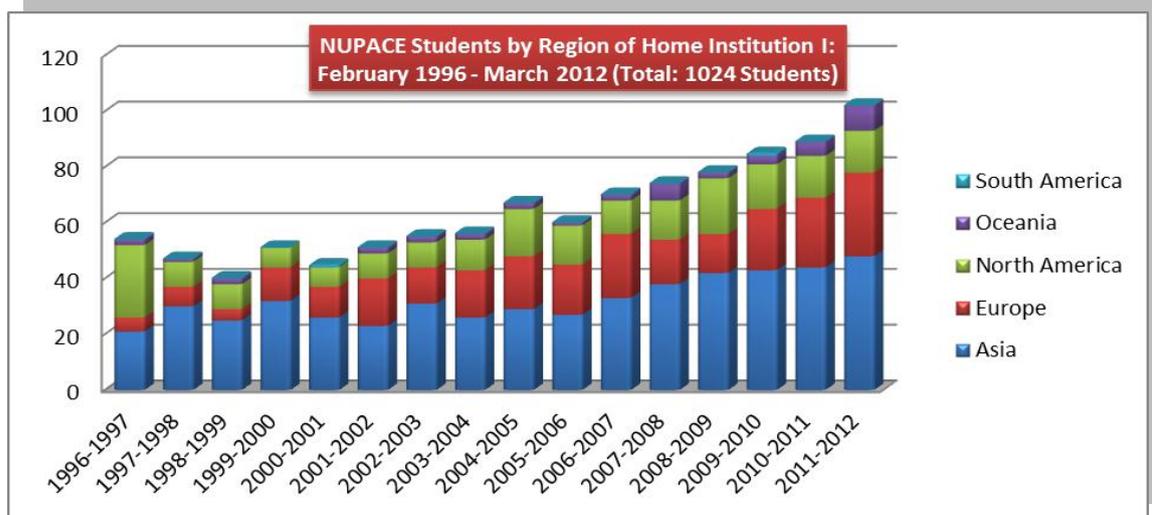

After graduation, Justin Wang returned to Japan and worked as an English instructor in Nagano prefecture from 2006 to 2008. Thereafter, he was employed as an internet banking customer service agent in the United States until 2010. Currently, Justin Wang is engaged in a master's programme in Environmental Studies at Nagoya University, focusing on the research of biodiesel synthesis. In addition, he currently serves as chairperson of the Nagoya University Co-op Foreign Students Association and the Nagoya University Taiwanese Student Association.

Mr. Benjamin Wood studied Japanese at Sheffield University, UK, from 1996 and, as part of the course, attended Nagoya University and NUPACE for six months from April 1999.

After returning to the United Kingdom, he finished his B.A. and then completed an M.A. in Japanese and Translation before moving back to Japan in 2002, this time to Miyagi Prefecture - a long way from Nagoya! Benjamin Wood has been resident in Japan ever since and is now a freelance translator, living with his wife and two children in Furukawa, Miyagi.
